Dr. Savaglio-Jarvis presented the Elementary Standards-Based Grading: Progress Monitoring and Assessing for Student Learning as contained in the agenda. She explained that the concept behind personalized learning has driven professional educators to recognize the need to assess student learning based on the current newly defined Common Core State Standards. Currently, kindergarten through grade 2 reporting measures student learning by clearly defining standards; however, once a student moves to grade 3, student work is measured by a letter grade which truly has no meaning when one understands the language behind standards-based grading. Ms. Susan Akina, a teacher at Bradford High School, was also present and shared a Standards-Based Grading PowerPoint presentation which included the following topics: What are Standards, and Why Change?, Parents and Students Will Get More Information About:, If You Want to Show Student Growth You Cannot Rely on the 100 Point Scale, 2 Students With a Score of 70, Grading Rubric (Elementary Proficiency Scale), How Does Standards-Based Grading Motivate Students?, and What is the Most Important Difference?

She indicated that the District entered into a contract with Evans Newton, Inc. to provide professional development and job-embedded coaching for 20 elementary principals and instructional coaches to ensure that professional learning communities were structured to perform at a high level. The remaining elementary principals were already working with Expeditionary Learning and incorporated training related to teacher collaboration around student achievement into additional learning experiences. In these two ways, all elementary principals and instructional coaches have been learning to lead their schools through the process of developing effective teacher collaboration teams that are focused on student achievement. Ms. Davis further explained that Evans-Newton, Inc. is also working with the four District content coordinators from Teaching and Learning. Their main work is driven around the questions, “What does the teaching of the common core look like in the classroom?” Three pilot schools (Brass, Bullen, and Indian Trail High School) were identified to work very closely with the content coordinators and the common core standards. Dr. Savaglio-Jarvis was also present and answered questions from Committee members.
