Kenosha School of Technology Enhanced Curriculum named Carthage College, Leeward Business Advisors and Snap-on Industrial as 2016 Distinguished Partners.

The awards, designed by KTEC alumnus Jakob Svatek, will be presented at the KTEC Fit for Growth Gala April 16.

Carthage was chosen for its involvement with KTEC, which serves as a professional development school for the college's education program. Carthage instructs KTEC students in aquaponics, vermicomposting, hydroponics, gardening activities and experiments.

Leeward Business Advisors works with KTEC students on computer science and coding programs, including an after-school coding club.

Snap-on Industrial supports KTEC's Project Lead the Way program and is collaborating with KTEC to create an Innovation Lab that will benefit students and the community. KTEC is also working with Snap-on to create a tool identification, application and safety curriculum for students starting in kindergarten.

The Fit for Growth gala is a fundraiser, with proceeds going toward construction of the school's Innovation Lab.
